WOOD STORY

When you're looking at Hunter Douglas genuine wood shutters, you're actually looking back in time. You're looking at how the wood grew, how weather and other environmental factors affected it. The natural mineral deposits, grain patterns and color variations all blend to create unique patterns and create an individual story that only your shutters can tell.

WOOD CHARACTERISTICS

The direction and regularity of the wood fibers – varies widely depending on where it was cut from within the tree. The type, direction and density of the grain produce the unique patterns and color variations that make each piece of wood distinctive.

Pin Knots

Mineral Streaks

Burl Figures

PIN KNOTS: The remnants of branches encased by the growth of new wood.

MINERAL STREAKS: Usually the result of environmental conditions affecting the development of the tree.

BURL FIGURES: Formed by irregular growth on the outer surface of the tree.

The amount and type of light also greatly affects the look of wood. It's under these typical lighting conditions where you want to check your color match. The photos below show how different light sources cause a change in the hue and color of the same piece of wood.
